

“ON” Framework 1

Expressing vs Impressing

What the framework states:

Learn to think out loud in front of a girl to give a glimpse of your personality.

What this means:

Stop trying to impress a girl.. Instead, focus on expressing your personality free from the agenda to impress.

Big Ideas:

WRONG: Its Anytime You Start Thinking “If Only She Knew...”

WRONG: Thinking, Calculating, Then Talking

Expressing is When You Cut Off the Need to Impress

How Can I Express My Opinions, My Observations and My Feelings About Them, My Humanity

Your Humanity is Your “REALNESS”

The Closer You Come to Packaging Up Your Realness, the Closer You Come to Naturally Being a Charismatic Person

Realness is What We Fall For

Expressing = Thinking Out Loud

Trying to Impress = Not Good Enough On His Own

How Can I Relay These Facts in a Way That Gives Her the Biggest Glimpse of My Humanity, My Opinions, and My Personality

Examples:

Here is of moving from impressing to expressing:

“My boss calls me into his office, and I’m shitting my pants because he’s a major dick, the type of guy you just want to punch in the face, but to my surprise he tells me I’m getting a raise and promotion.
So now, I’m staring at him, trying to look professional, but I’m like a giddy little school girl waiting to sneak off somewhere I can jump in the air and do a massive fist pump without anyone seeing me.”

The Reality of What I Just Said.

Instead of telling the story in a way that relays facts that try to impress the girl, I told the story in a way that gave her a glimpse inside my mind as it was happening.

Homework:

For the Rest of the Day, Practice Thinking Out Loud
